“ My grandma, Paw Paw was one of the strongest, intelligent, kind hearted and most influential women in my life. The thing I will remember the most though, will be her smile.

She played an instrumental role in my life. She along with my grandfather ran a grocery store. My grandfather would head off to the markets before the sun rose to get fresh fruit and veggies while Paw Paw would walk to the shop to open up and begin trade whilst she waited for her husband to come back. During school holidays I would often ask mum if I could go and work up the shop which I am sure my grandparents loved. They taught me so much and even though Paw Paws English wasn't the strongest all customers left happy as they would be greeted and farewelled with her beautiful smile. Even though the fruit shop is long gone parents of my friends will still ask to this day how she is, which warms my heart to see how much influence she had on people.

When they finally retired Paw Paws life turned to a couple things mahjong and cooking. She was old school and made everything from scratch no premade, prepacketed food but natural ingredients which was not only healthy but sensational to eat. She knew everyones favourite dish and if you were going over for dinner she would make it for you. Occasionally she would make these chinese dumplings that my 2 girls and I loved and I would get a call to go and pick some up cause she made extra for my girls. That was Paw Paws heart and love for you. She made you feel great about yourself and to always be better. Her love of food is definitely the reason I love cooking today.

We would have her over for dinner and I would try and cook up a storm for her with her favourites. When I finally sat down at the table I looked forward to getting her feedback. She would look at me and with that beautiful smile provide feedback both good and bad but I always felt great getting the advice and it always made me strive for even better next time. That was her nature.

I am so happy that not did I get to spend so many years with you but the next generation my daughter's Cassandra and Alyssa were able to as well. She accepted my wife Lisa and all partners into the family as though they were hers. Our love for you will never die and I am sure your spirit will always look over us, watching us with that beautiful smile.

We will miss you dearly. I can only thank you for everything that you did and taught us in the time we got to spend with one another. I know that when I look at my girls with their smiles your spirit lives in them and that warms my heart.

I love you and goodbye

“ My grandmother, Por Por was an intelligent and strong willed woman who achieved a great deal in the long and happy life she lived. She passed a lot on to her children who I am happy to say passed it on to me.

I will always remember the jar of butterscotch lollies on the kitchen bench, the numerous packets of chips in the hallway cupboard, and the couple of bottles of soft drink kept in the fridge for when visitors came over. I have to admit, I always looked forward to opening the chicken flavoured chips in the cupboard.

One of the fondest memories I have with Por Por is walking through the carpark of Southgate Shopping Centre walking with one hand in hers, the other in Mum's while they both swung me as we headed towards the entrance of the shopping centre. I remember looking up at her with a big smile thinking that I never wanted the swinging to end – not because of the thrill of being 15cm in the air, but because I was hand in hand with the two most strong and influential women in my life.

I may no longer see you, but I'll always treasure the special memories I shared with you over the 23 years of my life. It's difficult to imagine you not being around, but I feel so lucky to have had such a loving, beautiful and caring grandmother like you. I love you Por Por, with all my heart. Always.

With love,
Karina
