“ I was one of Jennifer's coworkers during her employment which was tragically cut short. One of my roles was to take photos of new starters, then they'd pick their favourite photo and it would shown on the company web site.

At the end of the photoshoot she saw a yellow Mustang and took a liking to it, and requested we take some photos posing with the car. The lighting wasn't favourable at that time of day and we planned to try again in the future. That unfortunately never happened.

She was seated next to me and we became friends. She was always an honest, caring and genuine person with a love for the great outdoors. She was very intelligent and I always thought she was going to contribute great things to the world. She's missed every day, and I hope she's found peace.
