“ In Memory of Mum from Vi: This brief biography of our mum's life was delivered at her funeral Service.

Early years and schooling

Mum was probably born in Guangzhou City (Canton) in south China but attended primary school in Hong Kong.

In the late 1930s and early 40s, our maternal grandparents moved to Saigon, alongside many other southern-Chinese people looking to make a better living and escape Japan's invasion of China. At this time, Vietnam was still under French administration. There, mum completed her secondary education in Ecole Chee Yung and was classmates with dad in junior high school. Her only impression of dad at this time was 'the boys' sitting at the back of the classroom and playing ping-pong during lunch. Dad wanted to study French after junior high, but his father opposed this, so he ended up quitting study altogether (but that's a story for another time).

Meanwhile, mum continued for another 3 years and completed senior high. After which, her father kept her at home for a year to learn cooking and other home-making duties to prepare her to be a proper wife and daughter-in-law. But before she was matched up, the school headmaster at her old school invited her to join the teaching faculty. In the 1950's, high school education was a rarity, even for males, so you can imagine the surprise of such an offer. She accepted with great joy and ended up being the head-teacher of class 4A for the next 30 years.

Work as a teacher

Being a teacher at this school had its own benefits: a nearby terraced house at discounted rent — and a couple of minutes away from school to boot. Some of these staff houses even had their back-doors connected to school grounds. We would walk home for lunch (a 2-hour break) and mum would squeeze in a nap before heading back for afternoon classes. Furthermore, any teacher's family received free schooling — a special privilege as Chee Yung was a private school. Mum told us that her youngest brother not only received free tuition but even received cash prizes for being one of the top three performers in his class (I also snagged these cash prizes a couple of times 🏆). From her first paycheck, all mum's earnings were handed over to her father (a wonderful legacy for her grandchildren to follow). At one stage in the early 1950s, she was even the sole breadwinner for the Lais. With all the school benefits attached, all her younger siblings (aunties 6, 7, 8, and uncle 9) attended school before returning to China via Hong Kong, thanks to her help.

*In these early days of her working life, apart from teaching, mum barely left the house. This worried her father so much that he urged her colleagues to take her out at every opportunity. This led to mum's love of ballroom dancing, which she enjoyed with her colleagues; she loved the waltz (and we miss how she taught it to us). She also especially enjoyed watching Western movies with Chinese captions; her favourite was Gone with the Wind which she watched 5 times in the cinema*

Love and marriage

In the mid-50s, her father went on a sightseeing trip to the countryside with a friend. Dropping into a grocery store in a small town, imagine his surprise to find out that the young man who managed the store was a student from the same school and year as mum! Apparently, dad made a striking enough first impression that her father set them up. Or maybe he was so worried about mum becoming an old spinster that he couldn't give her away quick enough!

Mum used to say that dad came into her house with empty hands, no money, and no job. They had a simple wedding and informed friends and relatives before traveling to DaLat for their honeymoon. I don't know what they were doing on their honeymoon, but then I came along!

Family-life

After I was born, there were 7 people in the household: mum and dad, mum's parents, and her youngest brother, me, and a maid. Our maid had always been part of the family; she was my Porpor's maid and came with them when the family left China. Mum was still the sole breadwinner then, while dad was able to find work here and there. To help with the day-to-day expenses, the single-story terrace (with a loft) was partitioned into a boarding house for five people. They brought in double-bunks to sublease to students from the countryside, much like a long-term hostel for sleeping only. Meanwhile, the family squeezed in the loft.

Despite this, eighteen months later, Ken came along (They don't muck around, do they? Can you imagine how they did it in such a crowd? Oh my!). But before Ken's first birthday, mum's parents and uncle 9 returned to Hong Kong and Guangzhou for good. They did, however, leave the maid to help mum and her family. Dad couldn't hold any long-term jobs until Jeff was 4 years old when he became a salesman for a laundry powder company. A company car was given to him (a Citroën 2CV) to complete sales and collect payments around all of South Vietnam. Then, as the company prospered and grew, he eventually became the National Sales Manager. Finally, the sole responsibility of breadwinning was lifted from mum's shoulders.

Leaving Vietnam

But many of these good things came to an end when the communists won the Vietnam civil war in 1975. While mum continued teaching at school, she was only allowed to teach the students in the morning (instead of having two sessions a day). In the afternoon, she and the other teachers were forced to learn about Marxism and write confession letters to instill this ideology in their students. Each day, she came home exhausted and would lie in bed, emotionally drained. This was a hard time for our family. This continued for 3 years until we escaped Vietnam by boat on May 1st, 1978 – without knowing that dad got caught by the regime and was put in jail.

Eventually, we arrived in Sydney, Australia, in September the same year; mum would come to call this country her home until she passed away on June 19th, 2020 at 94 years of age.

Afterword

Our mum was timid yet courageous. Introverted but lively. And very proud to be an independent, professional woman in her era. She stared into the unknown, overcame obstacles, crossed oceans, and gave herself selflessly to her parents, siblings, children, and grandchildren.

She leaves behind four children, five grandchildren, many friends, and hundreds of students across the world who love and respect her.

To those who follow after her, our mum gave up so much for us. And she gave up so much for you. We only ask that her sacrifices for us would not be forgotten. There is much more to her story, and it is worth knowing.

生日快樂！

我們上個月為您種了兩盆您喜愛的玫瑰，玫瑰名叫“Adorable”，名字貼切，花不單漂亮可愛，味覺清香，顏色是粉紅帶紫。它竟然及時在您的生日開花了！

記得去年農曆四月是潤月，雖然頭一個四月因疫情全悉尼被封閉，不能為您慶祝生日。第二個潤月餐館堂食仍未開放，但容許四個人家訪。感謝主！讓我們能在您的家為您慶祝生日。❤️

今年，雖然您不在身旁，但想到有一天能再見您，我滿心感恩！因為您信靠耶穌基督的十架救恩，已得著永生。

“ Thanks mum for reminding me that I never put my eulogy up on this wall. Happy birthday, 婆婆. I miss you.

慈慰

我有諗過有冇可能寫完翻譯成中文...但係諗多幾下都已經知道一定有可能. 所以對唔住大家, 呢個孫須要用英文講嘍(!).

婆婆 lived through so much, and survived so much.

During the war, she left 廣州, then 香港, ending up in a foreign country where she didn't speak the language.

In Vietnam, she found her teacher's voice - or, at least, her excuse for always being really loud. 阿媽 told me a story this week where, in the East Hills hostel, one of 婆婆's students from Saigon, who didn't know she had come to Australia, heard a loud voice!, and followed the complete lack of volume control until he found his old teacher.

婆婆 was also loud about how much she loved her family. She was so proud of her sons and her daughter, so proud of her grandchildren. I never did ask her if she loved my old piano pieces before I learned them, or /because/ I learned them. (Had some trouble with the names, though. "Canon in D" became "[something something] dinner"... and once, "breakfast".) Yet for all of my childhood laughter at her English, I don't remember her once laughing at my terrible Cantonese.

After decades in Saigon, 婆婆 had to go through it all again. In another foreign country where she didn't speak the language.

阿媽 told me about the long walk to work on Parramatta road, and the hill that was /so/ steep after full days of hard physical work at the factory. So many days where 婆婆 told mum thought she would just /fail/ on the long walk home, but she sang herself a song to find encouragement, and ask for strength to make it home:

*Through days of toil when heart does fail,
God will take care of you;
When dangers fierce your path assail,
God will take care of you.*

She loved music and poetry. The songs today were some of her favourites, and I hope you can join us in enjoying the words and music she loved.

I remember 婆婆 telling me about how she learned about God from her mother. She didn't go to church in Vietnam, but soon after coming to Sydney, she started going to church in Kogarah. For my whole life, she's lived with us for half the week, going to church with us, and taking care of us.

We've been living in upsetting times for a while now. I'm upset I can't give everyone a big hug for being here today to remember my 婆婆 with us. This week, when thinking about what I could share today, I've been a little upset to find my memories dominated by the last few years, where I've watched 婆婆 get frail, where more than anything else I've just been /worried/, all the time.

But I know she's not here any more. I know that she's free of this failed body, that she's not just at peace and free of suffering, but /living/, in a place of incredible, unknowable celebration, where God delights in her, and rejoices over her with singing.

This comfort isn't the reason why she believed - it's not the reason /we/ believe - but it's a conclusion drawn from it, and today, I remember it as a reassurance.

婆婆, I know you're with Jesus now. Thank you for almost 30 years of love and care and way too many biscuits and requests to play the dinner song. One day, a trumpet will sound, and God will descend from heaven, and those who have fallen asleep in Christ will rise. 婆婆, I'll see you then.

“ 媽咪回天家一個月了。

我和弟婦收拾媽媽房間時，都盡可能專注清理媽媽的衣物，信件，相簿，記事簿，崇拜聽道筆記，查經筆記，還有媽媽四十二年前初步到澳洲悉尼學英文的筆記及後期在教會的英文班的作業等等。年齡沒有成為媽媽學習的障礙。

移居到悉尼時，媽已五十出頭。媽媽選擇了積極地過新生活。從教學三十多年的"黎生"變成在意大利煙肉工廠的"亞Le"。媽常半開笑地說，當時上班就是去舉重！從一向執筆教學的轉變為以勞力生涯，真不簡單！她當年每天下班步行過斜坡路上要邊行邊唱，靠著聖詩"天父必看顧你"才行得到巴士站。這些都是在近十年來媽媽才提起的！另一首媽媽喜愛的聖詩是"感謝神"和"奇異恩典"。上兩週收拾間發現媽媽也喜歡抄寫這三首她最喜愛的聖詩。

媽媽謝謝您！您也立下了信靠上帝的好榜樣！

“ My family and I first met Mrs Quynh over 30 years ago at St Clement's Anglican Church, Marrickville. To us, Mrs Quynh was Vivian's mum and Joseph's mother-in-law. To our children, Mrs Quynh was Barnabas and Silas' grandmother. They were good times - worshipping and fellowshiping together, having meals in the church hall or in the big back yard of the Theim's residence, down the road from the church. We will have a familiar face to look out for when we arrive at our Father's house.

There are so many things that i would like to share with you and say to you, but there really are not enough words in this world that can convey my feelings but, i think the closest will be, Thank you.

Thank you for your heart, Thank you for your kindness, Thank you for your grace and elegance.

From every memory we have together all i can remember is your wisdom and kindness. You have only ever given to others and never took anything.

Your last words of wisdom to me was don't work too hard and these words have really been sitting with me deeply, a reminder to truly cherish every moment because time really does move so fast.

Thank you Mama for showing me your heart. Encourage me with my walk with God and just being there. I will miss you so much and i am so excited to see you again in eternity where i can spend more time with you.

“記得我初來教會有一年在海灘牧師為幾位弟兄施浸禮，那天我也去了因不善於與人交流，我獨自在岸邊漫步，是黃伯母主動來親近我，她熱誠的關懷，使我很感動。她熱愛主日崇拜時的讀經與接待的事奉，還鼓勵我並陪着我參加事奉。你我們一起參加週二早上查經班和長青組，每次結束後同坐一部火車回家。黃伯母熱愛教會也關心來聚會的人，甚致有一位可愛的弟兄會笑着向她報到。黃伯母走了，這麼突然很感失落，但看到天父愛她，使她無病痛安然離世！我與眾弟兄姊妹一樣同感安慰。 祝願她在天家快樂！

記得在我們坐船離開越南途中，您在船上唱了兩首徐志摩的詩歌給我聽，我不但學會唱「再別康橋」及「偶然」，也非常喜愛！

就如「再別康橋」裏的：輕輕地我走了，正如我輕輕地來。”我揮一揮衣袖，不帶走一片雲彩。”媽媽您突然地，悄悄地走了。我們做兒女，真是感到手無措施。

媽媽信靠主耶穌基督，每天早上梳洗後，跟著就開始閱讀聖經。直到媽媽離世的早上也不例外。當天是媽媽入醫院的次日，我早上打電話到她的手機，她說剛剛完了讀經靈修。

媽媽有寫事記的習慣，也有寫筆記的習慣—主日崇拜講道筆記；查經筆記；讀經筆記；靈修筆記等等……媽媽學習神的話語是認真，對永生盼望更是不疑。

媽，如今您已走完了人生旅程，雖然我滿有淚水和不捨，卻感恩您已經與主同在，好得無比。

“ Missed you so much mum!

On our boat journey from Cholon Vietnam at 1978, you taught me two of your favourite songs which I still remember.

These songs were derive from the Chinese modern poet, the famous Henry Tsu who studied at Cambridge, London 1922. Upon departing Cambridge, he wrote:

" Quietly, I come. Quietly, I leave"

" I just happen to cast a shadow on you"

They becomes my favourite songs since.

Love you mum!

Your daughter
