“ My brother, Seng, was a ladies' man in his younger days. He was a smooth dancer and was hailed as the Elvis Presley of Batu Pahat, our little home town in Malaysia. In fact, he stole the winning title in our local talentime!

Seng was always cheerful, with a tune in his speech and a swagger in his stride. Seng was the 6th child among 14 siblings. But 13 could not compare to the vibrance which he alone could bring with his easy manner and optimistic disposition. There was never a dull day growing up with Seng.

Now, my brother has been called Home. A different Home than the one we had. This Home is one he will share with the Heavenly Father. I celebrate the memories that I have of him and give thanks for having been blessed with him as my brother.
